WEEKLY REPUBLICAN—1887.
DAILY PUBLIC LEDGER—1899.

MAYSVILLE, KY., THURSDAY, APRIL 19, 1906.

THE MAN WHO DOESN'T WORRY.
There's many an easy-going man
Who does not fret and stew,
Nor lie awake to scheme and plan,
But sleeps the whole night through;
Who has no troublous hopes and fears,
No thirst for riches and renown;
Content he lingers through the years
And dies—indebted to the town.

Cincinnati people spend a great deal for outings. The head of the family attends to business during most of the week, but Saturday and Sunday he spends with his wife and children, and of business necessity he locates them where they can be reached by telephone. ARRESTED AT MANCHESTER

Murderer of Engineer Fleming Taken to Covington Last Night

The fugitive stayed all night in a box car at the Coal Docks and crossed the river here on the ferryboat about 10 o'clock, after loafing in Front street for about two hours.

Marshal Cooley of Manchester was informed of his coming by the officers of this city, but whether he will be willing to divide the $500 offered by the Q. and C. Railroad Company for his capture is a matter yet to be solved.

While at Manchester, Mitchell made a written confession, acknowledging the shooting of Engineer Fleming, but claiming that it was done in self-defense.

Mitchell is also charged by the Cincinnati Police as the man who shot and killed Clarence Slaughter, colored, in that city Sunday night.
